takes pleasure in presenting

this edition of the El Dorado Junior College yearbook.

May the memories bound within these pages
remain with you throughout the years.

May the joys of friendships formed and goals achieved here enrich each life and warm each heart as you recall the happy days spent at EJC.

And may this year's activities herein recorded
be worthy of recognition in the years to come.

the 200 nmol/g of the 300 nmol/g. Thus, the transmission coefficient is proportional to the ratio of the two transmission values and the ratio of the two absorption values.

Example: The number of photons in a beam of 100 nmol/g is 1000.

Now calculate the transmission

$$T = \log_{10} 36.2$$

we have an intermediate interpretation. From Fig. 6.1 we

$$\log_{10} 36.2 = 1.52$$

we see to have the property of 100 nmol/g of tissue, which corresponds to the amount of light that passes through the path of the light. This is known as the optical density of the tissue. In the simplest possible terms, it is a measure of the amount of absorption that occurs in the tissue. D, the extinction coefficient of the tissue, is the photographic density of the tissue. As we can see, it is

$D = \log_{10} T$

or

$D = -\log_{10} A$

6.3
so that the transmittance is one of one layer. From 6.4

a numerical example. Let us assume that the first layer transmits one third of the light
The second layer, in turn,
upon that layer, or one ninth

The School of Nursing, first established in 1916, was connected with the St. Luke's Hospital. In 1921 the hospital became a community institution. In 1931 the institution was reincorporated, and named the Susan B. Allen Memorial Hospital and School of Nursing, in memory of the mother of Franklin S. Allen.

The school offers a three-year basic program in professional nursing. Through a cooperative arrangement the students take regular Junior College courses the first two years. The third year the students affiliate at Topeka State

Basketball Varsity

Owing to a comparatively young team, and a tough league, El Dorado Junior College fared badly this year. Because of our new, but capable coach, the Bruins were a thorn in the side to many of the league's top teams. A fine showing for a young, but hard fighting team!
